IET Glasgow:Teacher Building

Directions

The IET Glasgow:Teacher Building retains much of its character and heritage from the days of housing the famous Teacher's Whisky. Today, this Grade II listed building in the centre of Glasgow's revitalised St Enoch Square, provides a city-centre venue for a range of events. It is only a short walk from Queen Street and Central stations and easily accessible from all major roads, airports and transport links.

Rail

Most long distance trains from the south travel into Glasgow Central Station. Glasgow's St Enoch Station on the city's subway network is approximately 20 yards from the entrance to IET Glasgow:Teacher Building.

Bus

There are buses running at least every 10 minutes on the following routes: 9, 18, 16, 16A, 62. Stops are made on Argyle Street, which adjoins Jamaica Street, Howard Street and Osborne Street to access St Enoch Square and the Teacher Building.

Air

All major UK airports fly to Glasgow Airport. To reach IET Glasgow:Teacher Building on arrival, you are best to take a taxi from outside the terminal building into the City Centre (approx. 20 minute journey). Many will know the venue by name or you can ask for St Enoch Place/St Enoch Square where the venue is located.

Addictions are a significant problem in modern society, placing great pressure on health care services. The sequelae of many of these addictions are of major relevance to oral health and those delivering Special Care Dentistry. This meeting will focus on substance abuse, including alcohol, tobacco and illegal drugs, with consideration of both the direct healthcare implications and the broader social impact.
